The stories originating from and recounted by those of us here at Child Advocates, Inc. are many things – shocking, heartwarming, sickening, fascinating, tragic, even occasionally funny. Often, they are some combination thereof.

They all have one thing in common, though: they are a recurring testament to the truly amazing spirit of the children we serve, the volunteers who work tirelessly on our behalf each day and the benevolent financial supporters who allow us to continue doing the work we do.

Since our inception in 1984, Child Advocates has trained more than 2,700 court appointed advocate volunteers who have gone on to make a difference in the lives of over 13,000 children.

That kind of history makes for some pretty awesome stories.

Whether you're a returning character or one that has yet to be part of our tale, we look forward to your help as we write the story of our future.

STORIES

“... the mother sits on Alan’s stomach as a form of discipline, pokes him with forks and knives, pinches his arms and forces him to kneel on his knees for long periods of time ...”

Stories of children beaten, burned, abandoned – it’s hard to describe them as anything other than horrific. And we hear a great many of them – 1,562 in 2005 to be exact.

Stories like Harrison and Nicolas’s – seven- and nine-year-old brothers who, during a drug raid by HPD, were found huddled in a hot back room of the trailer they lived in, while their mother and her boyfriend were in their air-conditioned bedroom, smoking crack and playing video games. Or stories like teenaged Eugenia’s – who was given drugs and alcohol by her father before he sexually molested her.

Each one of these children’s stories represents one innocent life. A child who – instead of thinking about school and friends and playing outside – thinks about what it would be like to live in a safe home with a family who loves him.

STORIES

“... trial for this case took seven days; Kelly testified for almost four hours ... about why it was in the children’s best interest to terminate the parents’ rights ... about the mother’s history and instability ...”

We definitely heard a lot of the word war in 2005 – in political debates, on the news, around the water cooler. But at Child Advocates, there were 440 Houstonians engaged in a different kind of war – the war against child abuse.

Darrell battled the system to get a firm answer on who would handle a father’s services when the kids on his case were placed with a grandmother who lived on the line between two counties. Arline went into the trenches for the eight special-needs children on her case when she created and kept a running list of each child’s testing scores, IQ score, and diagnoses – and then was able to use this information and compare it to more recent testing.

Arline and Darrell are just two examples of the individuals who are out every day passionately fighting – within the confines of the system – for the rights of “their” children.

“... Kristen really “cleaned up” all the details ... the mother had everyone so confused about what services she’d done ... she ended up relinquishing her parental rights, but surely would not have if Kristen had not been on the case.”

People often assume that the horror stories probably outweigh the success stories around here. But because our success stories come in so many shapes and sizes, it’s actually the other way around.

Because Caroline worked so hard to keep the communication open between all the parties to the case, a homestudy was finally approved on the relative in San Marcos and the children – to their delight – were placed there permanently. The case Tom was assigned to lasted over the course of three years, and in that time there were changes in caseworkers, supervisors and foster homes for the three children on the case. Tom was literally the only “constant” in the children’s lives during that period, and because of his dedication, termination was approved and adoptions are pending on all three children.

Whether in the form of reunification of healthy families or in the termination of parental rights to allow a child a life with a loving and supportive adoptive family, our success stories warm our hearts and bring us smiles every day. The beauty of our program model is evident time and again in the details of each one of these wonderful tales.

We like to think of it as “heroes in training.” Our volunteers learn about everything from the psychology of abuse to writing important court documents. Our 30-hour training program has become a model for CASA programs across the country. All six of our AU training sessions in 2005 were generously sponsored by BP America.

Knowledge never ends where we’re concerned. We empower our volunteers, even after they’ve completed training and have begun their roles as guardians ad litem. AU grad school covers a range of topics that speak directly to the experiences our volunteers encounter during the course of their volunteer work.

ANGELS OF HOPE LUNCHEON AND FASHION PRESENTATION

Each November, this annual luncheon and fashion presentation is the kickoff to Houston's holiday social season. Produced by the Friends of Child Advocates in conjunction with Neiman Marcus, our 2005 event honored former court appointed advocate and recent adoptive mom to three children from the foster care system, Page Parkes-Eveleth. The runway show – a preview of Oscar de la Renta's Spring 2006 line – put the luncheon on the Houston social crowd's "must-attend" list.

CAR PROS FOR KIDS

For the eleventh year in a row, participating auto service providers helped raise funds for Child Advocates during the month of February by offering two free oil changes to individuals who visited their shop and made a $25 donation to Child Advocates. One hundred percent of the proceeds benefited Child Advocates.

GIVING

Child Advocates cannot operate without the support of individuals, corporations and foundations. Year after year, we rely upon the benevolence of the entire community to help us fulfill our mission. Child Advocates has a host of giving opportunities ranging from supporting us through our direct mail campaign or becoming a sponsor of one of our special events. Every contribution helps us continue to provide critical services for abused children – as we are not a United Way agency and over 75% of our funds are raised through philanthropic gifts each year.

H-E-B HOUSTON CHILDREN'S FESTIVAL

The annual Houston Children's Festival – deemed "the Mayor's official event" – offers several city blocks of entertainment, complete with games, activities, crafts, exhibits, rides and more to tens of thousands of children and their families. The 2005 Festival featured appearances by Sponge Bob Square Pants and Dora the Explorer!

PULL FOR KIDS CLASSIC

This annual event – the largest of our fundraisers – honors individuals and corporations who have had a pivotal impact in the lives of abused children. The 2005 Pull for Kids Classic, presented by Accenture, honored BP America for its unparalleled support of Child Advocates' mission since 2000. The event kicked-off on Saturday morning with a daytime sporting clays tournament and concluded on Saturday evening with a festive party in a giant Continental Airlines hangar that offered food, fun and live musical entertainment for more than 700.

CHILD ADVOCATES, INC. 2005 HIGHLIGHTS

- After nearly seven years of hard work on the parts of so many, the final report of our longitudinal research study is published and available for distribution. Entitled Making a Difference in the Lives of Abused and Neglected Children, the publication demonstrates that children in custody are measurably better-off with a court appointed advocate assigned to their case.
- Of the 440 court appointed advocate volunteers assigned to cases in 2005, 54% were what we consider tenured volunteers (those who have worked three or more cases to date). This means that more than half of our court appointed advocates brought significant prior casework experience to the table.
- As a result of outstanding successes on all of our 2005 fundraising events – each one surpassed the revenue goal set! – we raised more than 120% of our accrual basis budget for the year.
- Court appointed advocates Mark Applegate, John Krebs and Susan Stotzer were recognized for their outstanding efforts in serving our children – Mark was awarded the Visteon “Go the Extra Mile” National Award by his company; John was named the 2005 James A. Gwinn Outstanding Volunteer of the Year by Child Advocates; and Susan’s employer, BMC, recognized her with the BMC “Building My Community” Award.
- The Houston Texans Foundation selected Child Advocates as one of their five officially-supported charities for the 2005, 2006, and 2007 NFL seasons.
- Just for Now: Kids and the People of the Court – an illustrated, hard-cover children’s book that can serve as a communication tool for children ages 6 to 12 and clarify the role of the court appointed advocate volunteers and others in the court system – is a reality. Nearly 50% of all funds required for the project were raised with printing and distribution to begin during 2006.
- From August through October, we conducted our 2005 Heroes Society Campaign with a goal of 100% participation from the Child Advocates “family”: Board, staff and court appointed advocates. Forty percent of our court appointed advocates made unrestricted financial donations and 100% of our staff and Board of Directors made an unrestricted financial donation directly, or had a gift made in their honor.

Hundreds of our 2005 stories ultimately ended happily – thanks to so many dedicated court appointed advocate volunteers in Harris County.

Someday, we hope to serve every abused and neglected child who needs us – but we need your help to get there. The 1,562 children that we served last year was less than half of the total who could have benefited from the life-changing service of a court appointed advocate. Our limits lie not in passion or desire – our limits lie only in our resources.

So, without your continued support, not every child who needs one will be assigned a volunteer ...

... what about their happy endings?
